Merritt Hawkins & Associates is the nation's leading provider of physician search and consulting services to medical groups, working with several hundred physician group practices each year.

A key focus of our company is to secure qualified candidates for medical groups seeking hard to find specialists. Krista Crump, Administrator of Hematology-Oncology Associates, discusses Merritt Hawkins & Associates' recruiting efforts on her group's behalf.

“Hematology-Oncology searches are becoming increasingly difficult due to the very limited supply of qualified candidates and the growing demand for hematology-oncology services. The process of finding physicians can certainly become frustrating and can hamper the goals of a medical group.”

“However, Merritt Hawkins & Associates provided us with the resources and expertise to be successful. A key element of their service is in-depth communication. It was important that they took the time to listen to our needs and understand our group's culture. They developed a thorough understanding of the type of physician likely to be successful within our group and that proved to be critical to our success.”

“The comprehensive candidate screening process and the extensive amount of front-end work Merritt Hawkins puts in clearly distinguish them from other national physician search firms with which I have worked. Merritt Hawkins & Associates' consultants are simply better listeners than other physician search professionals I have worked with.”

“I would certainly work with Merritt Hawkins & Associates again when the need arises.”
