CEO
Bradley County Medical Center
Warren, Arkansas

Since Merritt Hawkins was founded over 30 years ago, we have been proud to partner with rural healthcare facilities nationwide and to have helped recruit thousands of physicians to rural communities throughout America. In the following client assessment, Steve Henson, CEO with Bradley County Medical Center in Warren, Arkansas, shares how Merritt Hawkins performed for his rural facility.

“Our need was for a family medicine physician doing obstetrics.”

“There is a very small candidate pool to pull from, particularly for a Southeast Arkansas Critical Access Hospital in an economically depressed part of a rural state.”

“Merritt Hawkins responded to the challenge unbelievably well. From assignment of our Recruiting Consultant to our first interview was a matter of just a few weeks. And we had our physician signed within just a few months!”

“Proactive communication from our recruiter (including weekends) was one of Merritt Hawkins’ key strengths, combined with the history and track record of the firm.”

“Compared to the recruiting firm I worked with at a previous hospital, the level of communication I received from Merritt Hawkins was unrivalled.”

“It was an incredible recruiting experience. It far exceeded my expectations, given the recruitment challenges Merritt Hawkins was taking on.”

“There is absolutely nothing I would have changed, and I would both work with Merritt Hawkins again and recommend them to others.”
